

As the weeks go by, Jonas learns all the _____, but still sees only glimpses of them in the world around him.

Jonas is angry that the world is devoid of _____; it's not fair, he says.

Jonas realizes the wisdom. He agrees that people shouldn't be allowed to choose their own spouses or jobs, because they might be wrong. "We really have to protect people," he says, "from wrong choices," because that way "it's _____."

In your opinion, would it be worse to suffer the consequences of making poor choices or no to be able to make choices at all?

When have you been protected from making poor choices? Explain:

The Giver explains that Jonas can apply for a spouse some day if he wants to, but it will be difficult. _____, for example, would have to be hidden from his family.

The Giver explains that, when she (the last Receiver of Memory) failed, the memories didn't come back to him. Instead, they were

He walks all the way to the _____ and stands at the bridge that leads to other communities. He's crossed it a few times, on school trips, for example, but other than that, travel across it is forbidden.
